MEMORIAL RECORD.

INTRODUCTION.

Among the reflecting portion of mankind, there is probably not one who will ever forget the feelings of anxiety and sorrow exhibited by the people in their vicinity, who had friends or relatives actively engaged in quelling the great rebellion, which has so recently ravaged and nearly destroyed the fairest portion of this country. Who can forget the scenes of strife and bloodshed, accounts of which were received by nearly every mail, during the four years in which we were made a nation of mourners? The anxiety depicted on the countenances of those who, after each battle, waited for tidings from a husband, a son, or a brother, hoping for the best, and yet fearing the worst; the suddenness with which their countenances would lighten up, when a letter was at last received, saying that he was safe; or the anguishing sorrow with which they would turn away, when they learned that he had given his life in behalf of his country, or been mangled by the deadly missiles hurled against him,—such scenes cannot be forgotten.

The inhabitants of Greensboro felt as deeply as any portion of the country the responsibility resting upon them, of helping to crush out the spirit of rebellion existing among the people of the south, and, with few exceptions, with strong arms and willing hearts, performed well their part in the great work. If they did not enlist, they encouraged others to do so, by offering various inducements to them. And while the fallen brave are held in grateful remembrance by all true patriots, let not the surviving soldiers be entirely forgotten. Let us remember those who sacrificed all the pleasures and comforts of home, to stand in the battle's front between their fellow citizens and the rebel horde who sought to destroy this glorious union, and the institutions of the land.

The South commenced this war without any justification whatever. For years the slave-holders had cherished the idea that slavery should never be abolished, nor even curtailed; that it should increase with the population, expanding westward, as new sections became settled. The majority of the inhabitants of the United States were opposed to this plan. And when, in 1860, it appeared by the elections that slavery could expand no further, the slave-holders, led on by a few ambitious men, commenced a fanatical civil war against the legitimate government of the United States, thinking to intimidate the North into acceding to their proposals, or else to effect a separation from the north. Neither plan succeeded. The North put forth its giant arm and crushed out the rebellious people, and in destroying the rebel government, it also swept out of existence that fearful curse, American slavery, and all the civilized world cried, Amen!

There were no better soldiers in the army than those who enlisted from Greensboro, and while none of them attained to a high rank, yet the cause is sufficiently plain without being in any way detrimental to them. There was no company, or majority of a company, organized in this town. There were only eight from this town in any one company, with the exception of Co. I, 15th Regiment, in which there were about twenty. As a result of this, they had, as it were, no voice in the election of officers, either commissioned or non-commissioned—that is, in comparison with other and larger towns. But their services were just as valuable to the country, and they are entitled to as much praise as though they had all been generals. They periled their lives, their morals, their religious principles, their honor and their fair names among their fellowmen, for the sake of those who remained at home. They did so willingly and cheerfully, and while they did not, and could not expect to wholly escape all the dangers that beset them, yet, sustained by the cheering letters from home, and a steadfastness of purpose to resist temptation, the soldiers from this town were in many cases examples worthy to be followed by their comrades.

The most that can be said in favor of any soldier is, that knowing his duty, he performed it; and this can be said of nearly every soldier that enlisted from this town. There were four or five who became discouraged by the prospect of a long and tedious service, and disgracefully deserted their comrades in arms; but their punishment, which will last during their lives, will be sufficiently severe without addition by any one. Before giving an account of each soldier, a short account will be given of the action of the town, in regard to enlisting them, in connection with the various calls of the President under which they were enlisted, and in the last chapter an account of each regiment. The movements of each soldier, while with the regiment, can thus be easily ascertained, and when absent, a detailed account of his doings will be given after his name.

The object of this work is to preserve the substantial facts in regard to the soldiers herein named, and many current anecdotes in regard to them have been omitted, so that no one can complain of injustice.

CHAPTER I.

The various calls of the President for troops during the war, were as follows:

|----------------------|--------------------|---------|
| Apr. 15th, 1861..... | 9 months men | 75 000 |
| July 22d, 1861..... | 3 years men..... | 500 000 |
| July 5th, 1862..... | 3 years men..... | 300 000 |

| Dec. 19th, 1864..... | 3 years men..... | 300 000 |
| Total, | | 2,675 000 |

Of the 75,000 three months men, none enlisted from this town. Three enlisted at the same time for the Second Regiment, and were the first who enlisted from this town. Their names were Seth P. Somers, George Withers and Elisha E. Rollins. The Third Regiment was raised shortly after, and six of our citizens enlisted in that organization. The First, Second and Third Regiments were recruited in the State at large, and when the State soon after adjusted its accounts with the United States, it found itself accredited to a large number of men who had not been accredited to the various towns. The surplus was immediately accredited to the towns according to their population, and appears in the reports as miscellaneous men, not accredited by name.

Under the call of July, 1861, the quota of this town was fixed at thirty-two. Those who had previously enlisted were accredited on that number. Recruiting was immediately commenced for the Fourth and Fifth Regiments. Eight men from this town joined the Fourth Regiment, but none enlisted for the Fifth. Recruiting was continued by the selectmen, and five were enlisted for the Sixth Regiment, three for the Seventh, one for the Eighth, and three for the Ninth Regiment. Under the call of July 5th, 1862, the quota of this town was fixed at fifteen, and recruiting progressed rapidly for the Tenth and Eleventh Regiments. Only one of our citizens enlisted in the Tenth, and six in the Eleventh. A call was issued Aug. 4th, 1862, for 300,000 nine months men, and the quota of this town was fixed at eighteen. But twenty-two men enlisted for the Fifteenth Regiment, and the town gave them a bounty of twenty-five dollars each.

A town meeting was held Dec. 12th, 1862, and it was voted to pay the balance due for soldiers' bounty, amounting to forty dollars,

Only one of our citizens enlisted in the Tenth, and six in the Eleventh. A call was issued Aug. 4th, 1862, for 300,000 nine months men, and the quota of this town was fixed at eighteen. But twenty-two men enlisted for the Fifteenth Regiment, and the town gave them a bounty of twenty-five dollars each.

A town meeting was held Dec. 12th, 1862, and it was voted to pay the balance due for soldiers' bounty, amounting to forty dollars, deducting that paid by individuals. And it was also voted to raise fifty cents on a dollar of the grand list, to pay bounties and town expenses. A draft was made Aug. 28th, 1863, with the following result: Whole number drafted twelve, of which four entered the service. One (Thomas Abraham) procured a substitute, and seven paid three hundred dollars commutation, which amount exempted them from being liable to perform military duty for three years. Their names are as follows: Samuel P. Campbell, Benjamin Cate, Joseph A. Crane, Robert Esdon, Wallace W. Goss, George W. Wood and George Young. There were two persons not drafted, Henry Tolman and Clark Baker, who procured substitutes.

A call was issued Oct. 17th, 1863, for 300,000 three years men, and a town meeting was held Dec. 3d, 1863, when it was voted to pay each recruit, enlisted to fill the quota of the town on the last call for 300,000, three hundred dollars; also to pay each recruit enlisted to fill the quota on the draft, three hundred dollars, provided they were called for; and it was also voted to raise one hundred cents on a dollar of the grand list to pay town expenses.

Two calls were subsequently issued for 200,000 men each,—one on Feb. 1st, 1864, and the other March 14, 1864. A town meeting was held June 15th, 1864, when it was voted to pay each volunteer enlisted and mustered in, three hundred and fifty dollars; also to pay three hundred dollars to all drafted men who enter the service, either by themselves or by substitutes.

In December, 1863, an opportunity was offered by the government for soldiers who had served two years to reenlist, and they were assured by their officers, that they would receive the one hundred dollars bounty to which they were entitled, as well as all other bounties then being paid, including the local bounty then being paid by the various towns. Such was the confidence of the soldiers then at the front, in the patriotism, generosity and good faith of the people at home, that many readily accepted the offer, and were furnished with a thirty-five days furlough, enabling them to proceed home and conclude a bargain with their own town officers, or with those of some other town, for the local bounty then being paid. Four men reenlisted to the credit of this town for three years, as follows: Elnathan Bailey, Wm. K. Montgomery, Stephen B. Rogers and George Shepard. They entered upon their next three years full in the faith that they would receive as much bounty as was then being given to other recruits. But in this they were mistaken. The recruiting officers had got their names by dallying with them, without making any definite bargain, and when the time came that the bounty should be paid, they refused to pay what was justly due to four as valuable men to the service as ever left the town.

A call was issued July 18th, 1864, for 500,000 three years men. A town meeting was held Aug. 10th, 1864, when it was voted to raise two hundred cents on a dollar of the grand list to defray town expenses; also to instruct the selectmen to deposit money in the State Treasury for the purpose of obtaining recruits from the southern states, the amount deposited being left discretionary with the selectmen.

Another meeting was held Aug. 24th, 1864, and it was voted to rescind a vote passed June 15th, 1864, in regard to bounties; also voted to leave the question of bounties solely with the selectmen; and it was also voted to pay a bounty, at the discretion of the selectmen, to any man who should furnish himself with a substitute

At a meeting held Sept. 29th, 1864, it was voted to pay a bounty for the five extra volunteers, above the quota of the town, on the last call, as procured and paid by the selectmen; also voted to raise three hundred cents on a dollar of the grand list to pay bounties and the indebtedness of the town.

A call was issued Dec. 19th, 1864, for 300,000 three years men. And a town meeting was held Jan. 19th, 1865, when it was voted to instruct the selectmen to procure volunteers as cheaply as possible, not exceeding the number required from the town on the last call for 300,000. Another meeting was held Sept. 21st, 1865, and it was voted to raise two hundred cents on a dollar of the grand list to pay the indebtedness of the town and necessary expenses.

Thus it will be seen that eight hundred and fifty cents on a dollar of the grand list had been raised, which amount left the town nearly even, as 22,000 dollars had been paid for bounties and other expenses of the town.

Dec. 3d, 1864, six men were required from this town to fill its deficiency under all calls. These men were promptly enlisted.

The whole number of men who enlisted during the war is as follows ;

In regard to the bounties paid to the individual soldiers, the persons who have kept an account of them, are not willing that they should be published, lest it might result to the disadvantage of the town. Therefore, the most of those that are published, are such as appear to have been paid, on orders on the town treasury.

The soldiers who enlisted during the first of the war, did so for no pecuniary reasons, but as the hard struggle continued, from year to year, less enthusiasm was manifested, and it became necessary to offer some substantial inducements for men to enlist. This town paid fully as large bounties as other towns, and filled its quota on the various calls, with a promptness that did credit to those (principally the selectmen) whose business it was to enlist them.

The selectmen during the war were as follows: For 1861, and 1862, H. S. Tolman, J. N. Stevens, and Alex. Esdon. For 1863, H. S. Tolman, Alex. Esdon, and A. W. Wright. For 1864, H. S. Tolman, J. M. Smith, and Charles Cook. For 1865, H. S. Tolman, J. M. Smith, and Alex. McLaren.

To these men the credit is due of having used every reasonable exertion to sustain the credit of this town, as being a corporation which, recognizing the blessing of a free government, were willing to sustain it. This duty became a little more difficult in this town than it was in many others, owing to our population being partly composed of foreigners, who were not liable to perform military duty; and being of peaceful and industrious habits, they preferred to till the soil, rather than be fighting their brethren in the South. But those that did enlist displayed as much industry in subduing the rebels, as they did at home in subduing the rocky soil of their adopted homes.

The most revolting and cruel treatment that any of our citizens were called to endure, was realized by those who were captured and sent to the Andersonville prison. The inhumanity with which they were treated, beggars all description. It has been estimated that there was at one time in that pen, 30,000 of our brave northern soldiers. They were huddled together like so many brutes, without shelter, blankets or proper clothing, compelled to live, or rather starve, on the morsel of corn bread, or other rations that were furnished them, never at one time receiving one-fourth as much as their appetites craved. Imagine them shivering in the cold morning air, after having passed a miserable, sleepless night, on the bare cold ground, waiting for the pittance dealt out to them by their cruel captors, and perhaps glaring at the corpse of a comrade, who during the night had been relieved from his torment. Some became nearly crazed by their sufferings, and the prisoners were compelled to organize a police force, to protect themselves from a set of desperadoes who had become perfectly reckless, and nearly frantic, by their long confinement, and committed frequent murders and robberies.

Those that were sick were left to die in the camp; else, after having become so reduced as to be unable to walk, were carried to a miserable hospital, which they nearly all left for their graves. The water was so extremely filthy that a rush would be made, (when an opportunity was offered for them to get a cupful,) to near where it came into the enclosure, and so eager were they sometimes, that a few would get over or be pushed over the dead line, on such occasions, they were not always shot, but often a bullet came whistling near them. According to the best information possible to obtain, none, as has been stated, purposely crossed the dead line, to end their suffering by being shot down. The fact was there demonstrated that soldiers cling to life with the same tenacity as any other class of people, and keenly as they suffered, they did not give up all hope of being ultimately released.

CHAPTER II.

In the following account, received from the soldiers themselves, or their friends, some inaccuracies may possibly occur. All soldiers not otherwise designated, enlisted for three years. An ac-Count is also given of ten of our citizens who enlisted in other States or towns. Their names are as follows: Worthington Blake, John B. Cook, Luther M. T. Calderwood, John M. Hammond, Fletcher E. Kenniston, Sumner P. Rollins, Andrew J. Rollins, J. R. Woodward, John Olmstead, Sherman S. Pinney.

WYMAN H. ALLEN

Enlisted at the age of twenty-one years, at Montpelier, May 7th, 1861, as an original member of Co. F, 2d Regiment, and was mustered into the United States service, June 20th, at Burlington. He proceeded with the company to Washington, and remained with it until accidentally wounded in the knee by a bayonet. He was sent to Douglas Hospital, Washington, March 1st, 1862, and remained there until May 1st. He was then taken with the small pox and sent to Kalarama Hospital, and remained until June 1st, when he returned to Douglas Hospital, where he received his discharge July 19th, 1862. Returning home, he remained until Feb. 7th, 1865, when he enlisted as a recruit for the 8th Regiment, for one year, and was assigned to Co. C. He was mustered in at Burlington, Feb. 7th, and proceeded to Conscript Camp, Fair Haven, Conn., where he remained three weeks. He was then sent to the Regiment at Summit Point, Western Virginia, and was with it until mustered out at Ball's Cross Roads, Va., June 28th, 1865. He received $625.00 bounty from this town on the last enlistment.

FREDERICK ATHERTON

Enlisted at the age of thirty, at Greensboro, July 8th, 1861. He was mustered in at St. Johnsbury, July 16th, as an original member of Co. G, 3d Regiment. He deserted to the rebels Oct. 10th, 1861, since which time nothing has been heard from him. He had lived in this town but a few months previous to his enlistment.

LUMAN E. AMES,

Son of Royal Ames, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at Barton, at the age of eighteen, Sept. 3d, 1862, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Oct. 22d, 1862, as an original member of Co. I, 15th Regiment. While in camp at Fairfax Station, in February, he was taken with the lung fever, and sent to the regimental hospital, where he remained about six weeks; when nearly recovered he returned to the company, but was immediately taken with the measles, and he was sent to the Methodist Church Hospital, at Alexandria, where he remained until discharged from the service, July 2d, 1863.

DANIEL W. BAILEY,

Son of Samuel Bailey, was born in Barnston, P. Q. He enlisted at the age of twenty, at Greensboro, Jan. 29th, 1862, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Feb. 12th, as an original member of Co. H, 7th Regiment. He proceeded to Pensacola, Florida, with the command, where he died of the chronic diarrhœa, Jan. 29th, 1863, and his body was there buried.

THERON L. BAILEY,

Brother of Daniel W. Bailey, was born in Sutton, Vt. He enlisted at the age of twenty-four, at Greensboro, Sept. 24th, 1861, mustered in Oct. 15th, as an original member of Co. E, 6th Regiment. He served faithfully with the company until killed at the battle of the Wilderness, May 6th, 1864. His body was there buried.

ABIJAH BAILEY,

Born in Potton, P. Q., enlisted at the age of forty-four, as an original member of Co. I, 15th Regiment, at Greensboro, Sept. 3d, 1862. Mustered in with the company at Brattleboro, Oct. 22d. He remained with the company until discharged Aug. 5th, 1863.

ELNATHAN BAILEY

Was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of twenty-four, at Barton, Aug. 21st, 1861. Mustered in as a corporal of Co. D, 4th Regiment, at Barton, Sept. 20th. He followed the fortunes of the regiment faithfully, but was reduced to the ranks in the fall of 1863. He reënlisted Dec. 15th, 1863, and came home on a thirty-five days furlough. He returned to the company at its expiration, and participated in the following spring campaign. He was captured by the rebels at the Weldon Railroad, June 23d, 1864, and was sent to Andersonville prison, where, after severe suffering, he died Feb. 3d, 1865. His body was buried there.

HENRY BAILEY,

Son of A. M. Bailey, was born in Montpelier. He enlisted at the age of twenty-seven, as an original member of Co. D, 4th Regiment, at Barton, Aug. 1st, 1861, mustered in at Brattleboro, Sept. 20th. He was with his regiment during all its engagements, until wounded in the thigh by a minnie ball, at Bauks' Ford, May, 1863. He was immediately taken prisoner and remained in an old barn ten days, was then paroled and sent into the union lines, and remained in the general field hospital one week, thence to Howard Hospital, Washington, where he remained three weeks, thence to hospital at Brattleboro, where he remained a short time. He was then sent to Marine Hospital at Burlington, where he remained until transferred to the Invalid Corps, Nov. 20th, 1863, and was stationed at the following places: Brattleboro, Clifton Barracks, Washington, Hospital Boat Connecticut, in the Potomac River. He remained there until the expiration of his term of enlistment, and was discharged from the service at Clifton Barracks, Oct. 18th, 1864.

PHILIP D. BADGER,

Son of Samuel Badger, enlisted at Greensboro, at the age of thirty-nine, as an original member of the 2d Battery, Nov. 29th, 1861. He was mustered into the United States service, Dec. 16th, at Brandon. He remained with the company until taken sick with fever and ague, originating from sun stroke, Aug. 1st, 1862. He was in the hospital at New Orleans until discharged Jan. 20th, 1863.

JOHN W. BARTLETT

Was not a resident of this town. He enlisted at the age of twenty-one, Jan. 13th, 1862, and was mustered in Feb. 12th, as an original member of Co. K, 7th Regiment. He was discharged June 23d, 1863.

WILBUR E. BICKFORD,

Son of Stillman Bickford, enlisted at the age of eighteen, May 9th, 1863, as a recruit for Co. L, 11th Regiment, and was mustered in June 10th. He was reported wounded, in general hospital, Aug. 31st, 1864. Mustered out June 22d, 1865.

ZEBINA Y. BICKFORD,

Son of Paul Bickford, enlisted at the age of eighteen, Oct. 7th, 1861, and was mustered in as an original member of Co. D, 6th Regiment. Died April 30th, 1862.

JAMES H. BICKFORD,

Son of Paul Bickford, enlisted at the age of twenty-one, at Barton, Sept. 3d, 1862, and was mustered in Oct. 22d, as an original member of Co. I, 15th Regiment. He was mustered out at Brattleboro, Aug. 5th, 1863. He subsequently enlisted as a recruit for Co. L, 11th Regiment, Dec. 5th, 1863, and was mustered in Dec. 17th. He was promoted to corporal April 10th, 1864. Died June 7th, 1864, of wounds received in May, 1864.

HARLEY A. BICKFORD

Son of Paul Bickford, enlisted at the age of eighteen, at Barton, Sept. 3d, 1862, and was mustered in Oct. 22d, as an original member of Co. I, 15th Regiment, mustered out Aug. 5th, 1863.

GEORGE P. BUCKMAN

A resident of this town a short time, enlisted at the age of thirty-six, at Greensboro, Aug. 18th, 1862, and was mustered in Sept. 22d, as a recruit for Co. D, 4th Regiment. During his service he was sick with rheumatism and came home on a furlough. Mustered out July 13th, 1865.

HENRY BUSSEY

Was born in Canada, and never a resident of Greensboro. He enlisted for one year, at the age of eighteen, Feb. 9th, 1865, and was mustered in at the same time, as a recruit for Co. F, 7th Regiment. Mustered out Feb. 9th, 1866.

WORTHINGTON BLAKE,

Son of H. Blake, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted in Wisconsin, at the breaking out of the rebellion, in the 2d Wis. Regiment, and served with it faithfully until wounded through the face by a minnie ball. He was subsequently discharged.

JOHN B. COOK,

Son of Charles Cook, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted as an original member of Co. A, 14th Iowa Infantry, Sept. 23d-1861, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and was mustered into the United States service Sept. 25th. He proceeded to Iowa City, and thence with the Regiment to Fort Randall, Dakota Territory. He arrived there Dec. 5th, and remained, doing duty and building block houses, to prevent Indian depredations. He was detailed in the Q. M. department, taking care of stock and driving team. In Nov., 1863, he was sent to Sioux City with Q. M. stock, and remained there until the expiration of his term of enlistment. He was transferred with the company to Co. K, 7th Iowa Cavalry, in the Fall of 1863. Mustered out of service, Oct. 31st, 1864.

DENNISON COOK

Was born in Glover, and was not a resident of Greensboro. He enlisted for one year, at the age of thirty-six years, Aug. 23d, 1864, and was mustered at same date as a recruit for Co. I, 6th Regiment. He was transferred to Co. G, Oct. 16th, 1864; was missed Oct. 19th, 1864, and has not since been accounted for.

CHARLES P. COOK,

Son of James Cook, enlisted at the age of nineteen years, for one year, Feb. 28th, 1865, and was mustered into the United States service at the same time as a recruit for Co. B, 8th Regiment. He was mustered out June 28th, 1865. He was not a resident of Greensboro.

LUTHER M. T. CALDERWOOD,

Son of John Calderwood, was born in Glover. He enlisted for one year, at the age of eighteen years, as a recruit for Co. F, 1st Regiment Cavalry, Aug. 31st, 1864, at Burlington, and was mustered in the same day. Joining the company about Oct. 10th, he served with it until wounded in the foot with a minnie ball, at Berrysville, Nov. 12th, 1864. He was sent to hospital at Winchester, thence to Camden Street Hospital, Baltimore, where he remained ten days. He was then sent to the hospital at Brattleboro, thence to Montpelier, where he remained from Dec. 10th until March 25th, 1865. He was home during the time on a thirty days' furlough. He left Montpelier March 25th, and was taken sick with the typhoid fever at Bedloe's Island, N. Y. Harbor, and sent to Willet's Point, Long Island; thence to David's Island, N. Y. Harbor, where he remained until discharged June 21st, 1865. He was credited to Craftsbury, for which he received $625.00.

ANDREW CALDERWOOD,

Son of J. Calderwood, was born in Glover. He enlisted at the age of twenty, as a recruit for Co. I, 1st Regiment Cavalry, at Burlington, Sept. 1st, 1864, for one year. He was mustered in at the same time, immediately joined the company, and served with it in several engagements. Once, while away from camp for water, he was taken prisoner, but made his escape by running from his two captors, preferring the risk of being killed by a bullet to the horrors of a rebel prison. He was killed near Petersburg, by a minnie ball entering his side and passing through the heart, April 23d, 1865. He received $625.00 from the town.

SAMUEL W. CATE,

Son of N. Cate, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of nineteen, as an original member of Co. B, 3d Regiment, at Craftsbury, June 1st, 1861. He was mustered into the United States service July 16th, and remained with the company until Sept. 17th, 1862, at which time he deserted and went to Canada, returning after the close of the war.

EDWIN E. DEWEY

Enlisted at the age of twenty-nine, at Greensboro, Aug. 8th, 1862, as an original member of Co. F, 11th Regiment, and was mustered into the United States service Sept. 1st, at Brattleboro. He remained with his company until taken sick with lung fever, at Washington, Jan., 1863, when he was sent to the regimental hospital, returning to the company at the expiration of three weeks. He was promoted to artificer, June 23d, 1864. He received a grape shot in the knee at Cold Harbor, June 30th, 1864, which shattered the bones above and below the knee. He was immediately sent to the White House and amputation performed; thence to David's Island, N. Y. Harbor, where he suffered the most excruciating pain from the wound, gangrene having set in. He died there Aug. 7th, 1864, leaving a wife (a sister of Seth P. Somers) and two children to mourn his loss, as well as numerous friends, whose respect and confidence he possessed.

BYRON E. DEWEY,

Never a resident of Greensboro, enlisted at the age of twenty, for one year, Aug. 27th, 1864, and was mustered in at same date as a recruit for Co. E, 9th Regiment. He was mustered out June 13th, 1865. He received by town order $602.10 bounty.

SAMUEL H. DOW,

Son of S. Dow, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of nineteen, at Greensboro, Aug. 29th, 1861, as an original member of Co. D, 4th Regiment, and was mustered into the service at Brattleboro, Sept. 20th, 1861. He remained with the company at Camp Griffin, Va., until taken sick with dysentery, March 1st, 1862, when he was sent to Cliffburn general hospital, March 10th, 1862. He remained there sick two months, and as nurse two months. He was then sent to Fort Ellsworth, near Alexandria, but his health remaining poor, he was sent to Fairfax Seminary Hospital. In a few weeks he again went to Fort Ellsworth, rejoining his company when it arrived from the Peninsula. He proceeded with it to the second Bull Run battle, and back; then went to Fort Ellsworth again, when the company started on the Maryland campaign, and remained there until about Feb. 15th, 1863, when he rejoined his company at Belle Plain, Va., and was with it during the battles at St. Marie's Heights, second Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Funkstown, Rappahannock Station and Mine Run. He reenlisted, Feb. 10th, 1864, and went home on a thirty-five days' furlough, rejoining his company at Brandy Station, March 17th. He was wounded by a minnie ball in the thumb, at the battle of the Wilderness, May 5th, and was sent to Fredericksburg, thence to Washington, and thence to Brattleboro, from which place, wanting to see his friends and not being able to procure a furlough, he went without one; returning in four days, he was detailed as orderly for Surgeon Phelps. From Brattleboro he was sent to Cliffburn Hospital, Washington D. C., and rejoined his company July 11th, at Washington, and continued with it during the battles of Charlestown, Winchester and Fisher's Hill. He was detailed as officer's cook soon after the latter engagement, and remained detailed at Petersburg until shortly before the capture of Petersburg, when he was sent to his company, and was with it until mustered out at Ball's Cross Roads, Va., July 13th, 1865.

AMOS S. DOW,

Son of S. Dow, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of eighteen, at Greensboro, Nov. 7th, 1863, and was mustered in at same time, as a recruit for Co. F, 11th Regiment. He immediately joined the company and remained with it until about June 20th, 1864, when he was taken sick, and sent to the general hospital at City Point, where he remained about six weeks, then he rejoined his company, and was with it during all its movements, until transferred to Co. C, 11th Regiment, June 24th, 1865. He was mustered out with the regiment, Aug. 25th, 1864.

ERASTUS DROWN

Was born in Sheffield. He enlisted at the age of twenty-nine, at Greensboro, June 6th, 1862, and was mustered in as an original member of Co. E, 9th Regiment. He served with the regiment a short time, when he deserted, but was arrested almost immediately after and placed in confinement. He was discharged Jan. 14th, 1863, and in a short time enlisted in the regular army, and was stationed at Fort Pebly, Maine, from which place he again deserted and escaped to Province of Quebec. He was afterwards arrested by United States officers, since which time nothing definite has been learned of him. He was for a short time a resident of this town.

NELSON DROWN

Was born in Swanton, P. Q., and resided in this town but a short time. He enlisted at the age of twenty-six, as an original member of Co. I, 15th Infantry, Sept. 3d, 1862, and was mustered into United States service at Brattleboro, Oct. 22d. He remained with the company until taken with typhoid fever, and was then sent to Fairfax Seminary Hospital, May 7th, 1863. JOHN ESDON,

Son of James Esdon, was born in Scotland. He was drafted at the age of thirty-three, at Greensboro, Aug. 28th, 1863, and was mustered in at the same date as a recruit for Co. D, 4th Regiment. He immediately joined the company at Brandy Station, in Virginia, and remained with it until wounded by a minnie ball in both knees, at the Wilderness, May 5th, 1864. He was sent to the Union House Hospital, at Fredericksburg, where he died May 18th, 1864. His body was buried there.

LEWIS FLOWERS

Was born in Canada. He enlisted at the age of twenty-two, at Greensboro, Aug. 8th, 1862, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Sept. 1st, as an original member of Co. F, 11th Regiment. He served with the company until captured by the rebels at the Weldon Railroad, June 23d, 1864. He was sent to Andersonville, where he remained until exchanged and sent to Washington, at which place he died, Jan. 7th, 1865. His remains were interred there.

JOHN FOLSOM

Was born in Stanstead, P. Q. He enlisted at the age of forty-three years, at Greensboro, July 29th, 1862, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Sept. 1st, as an original member of Co. A, 10th Regiment. He served with the company until experiencing a slight illness, he went to the surgeon for some medicine, and by a mistake of the steward, was given poison, from the effects of which he immediately died, Oct. 31st, 1862, at Seneca Creek, Va. He was buried there.

AUGUSTUS P. FOLSOM,

Son of John Folsom, was born in Marshfield. He enlisted at the age of twenty years, Dec. 14th, 1863, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Dec. 24th, 1863, as a recruit for Co. D, 6th Regiment. He immediately joined the company at Brandy Station, and remained with it until wounded through the neck with a minnie ball at the battle of the Wilderness, May 6th, 1864. He was then sent to Fredericksburg, where he remained three days; thence to Alexandria. He received thirty days' furlough at the expiration of three days, proceeded home, and at the close of his furlough he reported at the hospital at Montpelier, where he remained as a patient two months, and as a ward master the remainder of his term. He was transferred to Co. G, 6th Regiment, Jan. 1st, 1865, and was discharged May 29th, 1865. He received $300 bounty from the town, and $300 from the United States.

ELISHA D. FRANKLIN

Was not a resident of Greensboro. Enlisted at the age of twenty-eight years, Sept. 9th, 1864, and was mustered in at the same time as a recruit for Co. I, 9th Regiment. He was transferred to Co. D, June 13th, 1865. Mustered out Dec. 1st, 1865.

THOMAS W. GRIFFIN,

Son of James Griffin, was born in Marshfield. He enlisted at the age of twenty-seven years, at Barton, Aug. 28th, 1861, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Sept. 20th, as an original member of Co. D, 4th Regiment, with the rank of sergeant. He remained with the company doing duty, until taken with the measles in December, and the 27th of the same month with typhoid fever. He preferred to remain in his tent rather than be sent to a hospital, and was allowed to do so until he received a furlough, and went home Feb. 1st, 1862. He recovered his health and rejoined his company on the Peninsula, at the siege of Yorktown, about April 10th, 1862, and remained with it until detailed to take charge of a portion of the ambulance train, belonging to the division, in the fall of 1862. He remained in that service ten months, at the end of which time he rejoined his company. He reënlisted Dec. 15th, 1863, and was credited to the town of Hardwick, receiving $300 for so doing, from that town, and $100 from the government. He received a thirty-five days' furlough and came home—returned to his company at its expiration, and was recommended for promotion to second lieutenant, which commission he would have received had he not been mortally wounded by a minnie ball, which entered his groin, at the battle of the Wilderness, May 5th, 1864. He managed to get to the rear, but died that night, and was buried by his comrades near the cross roads in the Wilderness, where his body now remains. He was a true son of Vermont, thoroughly patriotic and sincere in his actions, endowed with a lively intellect and buoyant spirits, and a mind not to be contaminated by the follies of the camp. He was one of the few who could remain in the army unaffected by its inevitable evils.

JAMES O. GRIFFIN,

Brother of Thomas W. Griffin, was born in Peacham. He enlisted at the age of eighteen, at Brattleboro, Sept. 3d, 1862, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Oct. 22d, as an original member of Co. I, 15th Regiment. He remained with the company until taken with typhoid fever, and sent to the regimental hospital Jan. 14th, 1863. He was transferred to the post hospital at Fairfax

Court House, Jan. 19th, and remained there until March, when he was taken to Fairfax Seminary Hospital. He rejoined his company June 15th, and marched to Gettysburg and Westminster, from which place he was sent to Philadelphia general hospital, where he remained three weeks. Thence he went to Brattleboro, Vt., and was mustered out with the regiment Aug. 5th. He came home and recovered his health, and in the fall of 1864 he enlisted at Greensboro for one year, as a recruit for the 1st Cavalry Regiment, and went to Burlington, but was not accepted. He then went to Fairlee and enlisted for that town, for which he received $500.00 from the town and $66.66 from the government. He was mustered in at Windsor, Sept. 24th, 1864, as a member of Co. B, 1st Cavalry, and was sent to the rendezvous camp at Fairhaven, Conn., where he was detailed to play in the Post Band. He remained there until April 28th, 1865, when he was sent to the Dismounted Camp at Chapel Point, Va. He was there until June 1st, when he joined his company near Washington, and remained with it until mustered out at Burlington, June 21st, 1865.

E, 9th Regiment. He was with the company (participating in the engagement at Harper's Ferry, Sept. 14th and 15th, 1862,) until sent to the hospital at Chicago, sick with erysipelas, March 10th, 1863. He returned to the company, April 10th, 1863, and was with it continually until mustered out at Burlington, June 13th, 1865.

ROBERT ROGERS,

Son of W. Rogers, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of twenty-one, at Irasburg, June 2d, 1862, as an original member of Co. E, 9th Regiment, and was mustered in with the company at Brattleboro, July 9th. He remained with the company until taken sick with inflammatory rheumatism, at Winchester, the last of July, 1862. He was discharged for disability, at Chicago, Nov. 6th, 1862. He returned home, and again enlisted as a recruit for Co. D, 4th Regiment, Dec. 11th, 1863. Mustered in Jan. 6th, 1864. He joined the company, then at Brandy Station, and was with it until wounded in the arm by a minnie ball, at the battle of the Wilderness, May 5th, 1864. He was at once sent towards Fredericksburg, but died from loss of blood before reaching there, May 7th, 1864, and was immediately buried.

EDWARD C. REED

Enlisted at the age of twenty-three, as an original member of

Co. K, 3d Regiment, July 10th, 1861. He was mustered into United States service with the company, July 16th, and mustered out July 21st, 1861. Subsequently he reënlisted at Worcester, Dec. 8th, 1861, as an original member of Co. E, 8th Regiment, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Feb. 18th, 1862. He proceeded with the company to Ship Island, where he was taken sick and sent to Marine Hospital, in April, 1862. He returned to the company in June, and remained with it a short time. Was then sent to the Marine Hospital, N. O.; thence to Port Hudson; thence to Marine Hospital, where he remained until discharged Feb. 9th, 1863.

HIRAM RICE,

Son of W. Rice, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of twenty-four, at Greensboro, Sept. 3d, 1862, as an original member of Co. I, 15th Regiment, and was mustered in with the company at Brattleboro, Oct. 22d. He was with the company during its service, and returned to Brattleboro the last of July, 1863. He then went home on a short furlough, but returned and was mustered out with the company, Aug. 5th, 1863. He immediately went home, and died Aug. 17th, 1863, of typhoid fever and chronic diarrhœa, diseases contracted while in the service.

GEORGE SHEPARD,

Son of M. Shepard, was born in Stannard. He enlisted at the age of twenty-nine, July 10th, 1861, as an original member of Co. K, 3d Regiment, and was mustered in with the company at St. Johnsbury, July 16th. He remained with the company until Dec. 31st, 1863, when he reënlisted and went home on a thirty-five days' furlough. He returned to the company at Brandy Station, March 17th; was sent to the Howard Hospital, D. C., April 25th, sick with rheumatism, and remained there until July 10th. He was then sent to Clifton Barracks, thence to Camp Distribution.

He rejoined his company at Bolivar Heights, July 29th, 1864, and remained with it until wounded in the leg by a minnie ball, at Cedar Creek, Oct. 19th, 1864. He was carried to the hospital at Newtown, and his leg amputated; was then taken to Martinsburg and Jarvis Hospital, Baltimore. Jan. 1st, 1865, he was sent from there to Montpelier Hospital, and remained until discharged, Sept. 1st, 1865.

CALVIN J. SHEPARD,

Son of M. Shepard, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of twenty-five years, Dec. 14th, 1863, and was mustered in Dec. 24th, as a recruit for Co. D, 6th Regiment. He proceeded to the regiment, then at Brandy Station, and remained with it until wounded in the battle of the Wilderness, May 5th, 1864, by a minnie ball passing through the hand. He was sent to the hospital at Fredericksburg; after three days was transferred to Fairfax Seminary Hospital, near Alexandria. Having obtained a furlough, he went home and remained sixty days: on his return he was sent to Camp Distribution, and from there to the regiment at Charlestown, Va. He was detailed in the ambulance train, in which he remained two months, until the regiment started for Petersburg, Dec. 1st. From that time he was with his company, constantly under fire or within shelling distance of the enemy, until April 2d, 1865. He was then detailed as train guard, but rejoined his company April 12th, at Burkville Junction. He proceeded with it to Danville, Richmond, and Alexandria. Was mustered out of service, June 26th, 1865, near Alexandria.

SETH P. SOMERS

Was born in Barnet, Vt. He enlisted at the age of nineteen years, at Montpelier, May 7th, 1861, as an original member of Co. F, 2d Regiment, and was mustered into United States service at Burlington, June 20th. He remained with the company until

Oct. 1st, 1861, when he was detailed as blacksmith; but not relishing the idea of being considered a non-combatant, he was returned to the company in a short time by request, and remained with it, faithfully discharging his duties, until wounded in the leg by a minnie ball, at the battle of Savage Station, June 29th, 1862. He was unavoidably left with others, under the care of surgeons; was taken prisoner the next morning and sent to Richmond, where he was kept two weeks; he was then taken to the general hospital at Baltimore, and remained there until discharged Nov. 9th, 1862. He went immediately home, and died Jan. 16th, 1863, from disease contracted from exposure on the Peninsula campaign. An earnest patriot, a noble soldier, a faithful and generous friend and a true comrade, his memory will ever be cherished by those who knew him.

HORACE SULHAM,

Son of Thomas P. Sulham, was born in Pelin, N. H. He enlisted at the age of 35, at Greensboro, Aug. 8th, 1862, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Sept. 1st, as an original member of Co. F, 11th Regiment. He was with the company until taken with the measles, the following December, and subsequently with a fever. After recovering his health he performed duty in the company until he received an eleven days' furlough, Feb. 11th, 1864, and came home. He afterwards was with the company until instantly killed by a minnie ball at the battle of Cold Harbor, June 1st, 1864. His body was buried there by his brother, Lemuel H. Sulham.

LEMUEL H. SULHAM,

Son of Thomas P. Sulham, was born in Woodstock, N. H. He enlisted at the age of thirty-three, at Greensboro, Aug. 8th, 1862, and was mustered in at Brattleboro Sept. 1st, as an original member of Co. F, 11th Regiment. He remained with the company until taken with the measles in the winter of 1862-3, and sent to the hospital. After two weeks he returned to the company, but his health remained poor, and he subsequently went to the hospital, sick with fever. When able he returned to the company again, and performed duty, until captured at the Weldon Railroad, June 23d, 1864. He was sent to Andersonville with the others captured at that time, and remained in that vile enclosure until the union troops approached near that place, when he was transferred to Charleston, S. C., where he died Dec. 26th, 1864. His body was buried there.

Son of Z. Thompson, was born in Woodstock, Vt. He enlisted at the age of twenty-two, at Worcester, Vt., Aug. 2d, 1862, as an original member of Co. I, 11th Regiment, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Sept. 1st. He was with the company until sun struck, and sent to the regimental hospital at Fort Slocum; remained there until transferred to the Invalid Corps, March 15th, 1863. He was at Clifton Barracks until discharged, Feb. 17th, 1864.

ISAIAH THOMPSON,

Son of Y. Thompson, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of eighteen, at Worcester, Vt., Aug. 9th, 1862, as an original member of Co. I, 11th Regiment, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Sept. 1st. He proceeded with the company to Fort Lincoln, Washington, and was sick with fever in the regimental hospital a short time. He returned to the company soon as able, and was with it at Fort Thayer and Fort Stevens. He was taken sick about Aug. 15th, 1863, and sent to the regimental hospital, where he remained until transferred to the Invalid Corps, March 15th, 1864. He was discharged the same year.

AMASA F. THOMPSON,

Son of Z. Thompson, was born in Glover. He enlisted at the age of nineteen, for one year, at Burlington, Feb. 7th, 1865, and was mustered in at the same time, and place, as a recruit for Co. C, 8th Infantry. He was sent to Fairhaven, Conn., where he remained three weeks, and then he joined the regiment at Summit Point, Va.; April 16th, moved to Camp Russell, and after a few days, back to Summit Point, and then was ordered to Washington, to ship for South Carolina. The order was countermanded and he was sent to Munson's Hill, Va., where he remained until mustered out near Ball's Cross Roads, June 28th, 1865. He received a bounty amounting to about $500.00.

MYRON C. TIFFANY,

Son of C. Tiffany, was born in Cambridge, Vt. He enlisted at the age of twenty-one, at Barton, Sept. 3d, 1862, as an original member of Co. I, 15th Regiment. He soon came home sick, and remained until the company was about to start for Brattleboro, when he rejoined the company and was mustered into the service with it at Brattleboro, Oct. 22d. He remained with the company, enjoying excellent health, and faithfully performing the duties assigned him, until taken sick with typhoid pneumonia, about May 12th, 1863. He died in the regimental hospital at Union Mills, May 20th. His body was embalmed at Union Mills, sent home, and buried in the burying ground near Mr. Marshall's. His loss was severely felt in the company, more especially by those with whom he was intimately acquainted.

CHARLES W. WALLACE

Was born in Stowe, Maine. He enlisted at the age of nineteen, at East Hardwick, October 2d, 1861, and was mustered in at Montpelier, Oct. 15th, as an original member of Co. E, 6th Regiment. He served with the company until taken sick and sent to the hospital, where he was discharged, Jan. 10th, 1863. He was not a resident of Greensboro.

GEORGE WITHERS

Was born in Bath, N. H. He enlisted at the age of twenty-three, at Montpelier, May 7th, 1861, as an original member of Co. F, 2d Regiment, and was mustered into the State service, May 20th, at Montpelier, and into the United States service, June 20th, at Burlington. He was with the regiment and participated in all its engagements, until wounded in the arm by a minnie ball at Savage Station, at eight p.m., June 29th, 1862. He was assisted one mile to the rear by George Flagg, a member of the company from Braintree, and left in a temporary hospital. He was taken by the rebels next morning and sent to Richmond, was exchanged July 26th, and carried to the general hospital at West Philadelphia, where he died July 28th, 1862. He was buried in Glenwood Cemetery. He was a faithful soldier and comrade, and one whose morals were not to be questioned. He was endowed with that kind of patriotism that would not allow him to remain inactive when he knew that his services were needed in front of the enemy. He was one of the first to enlist from Greensboro, and one of the first to give up his all in behalf of freedom.

GEORGE F. WOODMANCY,

Son of E. Woodmancy, deceased, was born in Greensboro. He enlisted at the age of eighteen, at Greensboro, Dec. 7th, 1863, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Jan. 6th, 1864, as a recruit for Co. F, 11th Regiment. He immediately joined the company, and served with it until taken with the measles. He recovered in a short time, and performed duty until captured at the Weldon Railroad, June 23d, 1864, and sent to Andersonville. He was taken sick there with typhoid pneumonia, and after severe suffering, died Sept. 9th, 1864. His body was buried there. He received by town order $381.63 bounty.

GEORGE S. WHITNEY

Enlisted at the age of nineteen, Aug. 23d, 1864, for one year, and was mustered in at the same time, as a recruit for Co. I, 1st Cavalry. He was mustered out June 2d, 1865. He received by town order a bounty amounting to $626.56.

Son of Nathan Ward, was born in Ceylon, Indian Ocean. He was drafted at the age of twenty-four, at Greensboro, July 28th, 1863, and was mustered in at the same time as a recruit for Co. D, 4th Regiment. He was in the hospital nearly all his time of service, and but little is known of his proceedings. He was discharged June 27th, 1865.

FRANKLIN WOODWARD,

Son of J. Woodward, was born in Peacham. He enlisted at the age of nineteen at Greensboro, and was mustered in at Brattleboro, Jan. 4th, 1864, as a recruit for Co. F, 11th Regiment. He at once joined the company, and served with it continually until taken prisoner at the Weldon Railroad, June 23d, 1864. He was sent to Andersonville, where he died of starvation and exposure, some time in September, 1864. Thus perished another victim of Davis, Wirz, and their murderous underlings. He received a bounty according to town orders, amounting to about $600.

JOSEPH R. WOODWARD,

Son of J. Woodward, was born in Peacham. He enlisted at the age of twenty years, at Concord, N. H., in July, 1862, and was mustered in at the same place, as a recruit for Co. E, 5th N. H. Regiment. He served with the company at Point Lookout, Maryland, and in Virginia, until wounded at Petersburg, June 17th, 1864. He was sent to the hospital at White House Landing, and died from the effects of his wound.

CHAPTER III.

The Second Regiment was recruited from the State at large, and was mustered into the United States service at Burlington, June 20th, 1861, under the following officers: Colonel Henry Whiting, Lieut. Colonel George J. Stannard, Major Charles H. Joyce. It left the State, June 24th, and arrived at Capitol Hill, Washington, D. C., the 26th, via Troy, New York City, Philadelphia and Baltimore. It remained at Capitol Hill until July

10th; then crossed the Potomac to Alexandria, and marched to Bush Hill, four miles from the latter place, near the Orange & Alexandria Railroad, and there went into camp. It remained there until the 16th, when it started on the march to Centreville, and arrived there the 19th, and remained in camp until Sunday, July 21st. On that day, in connection with the Third, Fourth and Fifth Maine Regiments, under command of General O. O Howard, it proceeded to the Bull Run Battle, distant some six miles, but owing to the obstructed roads, it had to make a detour to the right through a swamp, making, in all, nine miles distance that they were obliged to march before reaching the scene of conflict. On nearing the field, they discovered that the Union forces were broken up and retreating in disorder. But nothing daunted, they pressed on, and charged across the Gainesville road, and over a slight eminence. They received the rebel fire as they passed over the rise, but did not halt to return it until half way down the ravine, across which, in a piece of woods, the rebels were posted. Here they poured a deadly fire into the ranks of the enemy, which drove them back; but as they received no orders to charge, their ranks became broken, and soon an order to retreat was given, and they, like the rest of the army, fell back towards Centreville, where the most of the regiment arrived at nine o'clock in the evening, and soon after were started on the march to Alexandria, and arrived there the 22d. The regiment was quartered in the Mayor's office and adjoining rooms, until the 25th, when it returned to Bush Hill, and remained until Aug. 12th, when it moved to Camp Lyon, Md., near Chain Bridge. It left there the 20th for Great Falls, where it remained, doing picket duty until the 26th. It then returned to Camp Lyon, and crossed Chain Bridge into Virginia, Sept. 3d, in connection with the 3d Vermont Regiment, and 33d New York, under command of Gen. Wm. F. Smith. It remained two miles west of the Bridge, employed in constructing Fort Ethan Allen, with the exception of Companies A and F, which were detailed to guard a battery, and while there, participated in a skirmish at Lewinsville. The regiment remained near Forts Ethan Allen and Marcy until Oct. 9th, when it moved to Camp Griffin, near Lewinsville, and thereafter constituted a portion of the Vermont Brigade.

The Third Regiment was mustered into the United States service at St. Johnsbury, July 16th, 1861, and left the State, July 24th, under the following officers: Col. Wm. F. Smith, Lieut. Col. Breed N. Hyde, Maj. Walter W. Cochran. It proceeded directly to Washington, thence to Camp Lyon, where it remained until Sept. 3d, when it crossed Chain Bridge, and was employed felling trees and building Fort Marcy. It also performed an important part in the engagement at Lewinsville, Sept. 11th, after which it returned to Fort Marcy, and remained until Oct. 9th, when it moved to Camp Griffin and formed a part of the Vermont Brigade.

The Fourth Regiment was mustered into the United States service at Brattleboro, Sept. 21st, 1861, with the following field officers: Col. Edwin H. Stoughton, Lieut. Col. Harry W. Worthen, Maj. John C. Tyler. It left the State Sept. 21st, and proceeded directly to Washington, where it remained a week, thence to Camp Advance, near Fort Marcy, where it remained until Oct. 9th, when it proceeded to Camp Griffin and formed a part of the Vermont Brigade.

The Fifth Regiment was mustered into the United States service Sept. 16th, 1861, at St. Albans, and left the State Sept. 23d, under the following officers: Col. Henry A. Smalley, Lieut. Col. Nathan Lord, Jr., Maj. Lewis A. Grant. It proceeded directly to Washington, where it remained a few days, thence to Camp Advance, and moved to Camp Griffin Oct. 9th, and its history thereafter will be found in that of the Vermont Brigade, which was placed under command of W. T. H. Brooks, of the Regular Cavalry, but lately promoted to Brigadier General of Volunteers.

The Sixth Regiment was mustered into the United States service at Montpelier, Oct. 15th, 1861, with the following officers: Col. Nathan Lord, Jr., Lieut. Col. Asa P. Blunt, Maj. Oscar S. Tuttle. It left the State, Oct. 20th, and proceeded to Camp Griffin, Va., where it was incorporated into the Vermont Brigade.

The brigade remained at Camp Griffin during the winter of 1861-2, without anything of importance happening to it. The men were drilled thoroughly, and required to perform camp guard and picket duty. They were sent out on a skirmish occasionally, to ascertain the position of the enemy's pickets. They left the camp, March 10th, 1862, forming the Second Brigade, Gen. W. T. H. Brooks, of the 2d Division; Gen. Wm. F. Smith, of the 4th Army Corps; Gen. Keyes, commanding. They proceeded to Flint Hill, thence to Cloud's Mills, the 15th, where they remained until the 23d, when they marched to Alexandria, and were transported to Fortress Monroe, via Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay.

They arrived at Fortress Monroe the 24th, and went into camp a short distance from Hampton, the 25th. The 27th, they made a reconnoissance toward Young's Mills, then returned near Newport News, where they remained until April 4th, when they started on the Peninsula campaign, and attacked the enemy at Warwick Creek, the 5th, without any decisive result. They were soon after moved to the right a short distance, and were employed constructing corduroy roads and earth works.

The 16th, the battle of Lee's Mills was fought, in which the Third and Sixth Regiments suffered severely, the Fourth and Fifth Regiments lost a number in killed and wounded, the Second was used as a support, and lost only one man. The rebels still retained their position on the opposite side of the creek, and the brigade, in conjunction with other troops, was set vigorously at work making breastworks and rifle pits, for the purpose of dislodging them.

They remained there continually under fire until May 3d. The enemy having evacuated their works, the brigade moved through them, and made a forced march towards Williamsburg, where it arrived at dusk, and remained near the rebel lines during the night.

The 4th, the battle of Williamsburg was fought, but the brigade was used as a support, and although the men were under fire all day, they were not allowed to take an active part in the engagement. They went into camp the 5th and remained until the 9th, when they moved towards Richmond, and arrived near West Point the 10th, remained there the 12th, and went to Kent's Landing the 13th, and to the White House the 14th, where they, with the rest of the troops composing the 2d Division, 4th Corps, were transferred to the 6th corps, retaining their original brigade and division number.

The 19th, they again started on the march up the Peninsula, and camped that night at Tunstall's Station. They finally arrived at the North-west side of the Chickabominy the 24th, and were shelled from the opposite side of that stream, then went into camp on the south-east side, near the enemy's lines, and within six miles of Richmond. While there, they were continually under artillery fire, and when on picket, within talking distance of the rebels. They were employed part of the time in constructing earth works, and were engaged in several skirmishes, previous to June 24th, when the army commenced its retreat. They moved to Savage Station the 29th, where they had a severe engagement, which lasted until after dark, when the enemy having been repulsed, they continued their retreat and crossed White Oak Swamp at 2 o'clock, the morning of the 30th, and went into camp. They were subjected to a heavy artillery fire that day, and moved near to the James River that night.

July 1st, they were placed in line of battle to the right of Malvern Hill, but for some reason the enemy made no attack on the portion of the line held by them, and the next day they moved to Harrison's Landing, where they remained until Aug. 16th. when they moved down the Peninsula by easy marches, and arrived at Fortress Monroe the 22d, then proceeded to Alexandria by steamboat, where they arrived the 24th, and went into camp near Fairfax Seminary. They moved towards Centreville the 29th, camped near Fairfax Court House that night, and made a forced march the 30th, to the second Bull Run battle-field, where they arrived at dusk; but were immediately ordered back to Centreville, and remained at the latter place the 31st and Sept. 1st, but moved that night back to Fairfax Court House. The 2d, they moved back to Fairfax Seminary, near Alexandria, and remained until the night of the 6th, when they moved across Long Bridge through Washington to Tennallytown, Md., thence marched to Sugar Loaf Mountain, via Rockville, on the 8th. Darnestown the 9th, and arrived at Barnesville the 10th. They had a lively skirmish at Sugar Loaf Mountain the 11th, in which the enemy was put to flight. They camped for the night near the mountain, and camped the next night near the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, seven miles from Frederick City.

The 13th, they moved to Adamstown, and the 14th, through Jefferson to Burketville, where they encountered the enemy in force, posted in and on either side of Crampton Pass, in the south mountains. The town was soon captured, as well as the rebel force, at the foot of the mountain. They then charged up the mountain, driving the rebels in great haste from their elevated position and captured a large number of prisoners, as well as knapsacks, tents, small arms, and one brass field piece. They remained near here the 15th and 16th. The 17th, they were routed early, and started on the march at 7 A.M., and moved as rapidly as possible, for a distance of seven miles, when they rushed into the battle of Antietam, and passed under a heavy artillery fire, to the extreme right, when they were ordered back to the center, and here they charged on the enemy's advanced position and forced their troops back through a cornfield, but were halted as soon as the line was rectified, and ordered to lie down, where they remained during the remainder of the engagement, experiencing a heavy artillery fire and pretty sharp musketry, until the morning of the 19th, when the rebels having retreated, they were moved through Sharpsburg to the Potomac river, thence to Williamsport the 20th, and the 23d moved to Mercerville, thence to Hagerstown the 26th, where the brigade was placed, some distance from other troops, to recruit in health and numbers. An installment of troops came the 10th of October, also the Twenty-sixth New York, a nine months regiment, was attached to the brigade. Gen. Brooks was placed in command of the First Division, and Col. Whiting succeeded to the command of the brigade. The Second and Fifth regiments were sent to Chambersburg the 11th, on account of a cavalry raid. They returned the 16th.

The brigade remained here until the 29th, then moved towards the rebels. They passed through Boonesboro, Crampton Pass; crossed the Potomac at Berlin, and moved through Lovettsville; remained at White Plains the 7th and 8th of November, and moved to New Baltimore the 9th, remained there until the 16th, and arrived at Aquia Creek, the 19th. The 3d of December, the 2d Regiment was detailed to guard the telegraph, and the brigade moved to Belle Plain, joined by the 2d Regiment, December 10th. They participated in the battle of Fredericksburg, the 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th. They were held partly in reserve the 11th and 12th, but were placed in the thickest of the fight, the 13th. The 4th and 2d deployed as skirmishers, and advanced on the rebel lines. They sustained several charges by rebel lines of battle, but steadily gained ground, which was disputed by them inch by inch, until darkness came on. The firing ceased, and during the night they were relieved by fresh troops. They were not actively engaged the 14th, and recrossed the river the 15th.

The 19th, they went into camp at Belle Plain. The 2d Regiment was sent to Belle Landing, the 29th, on fatigue duty, building roads and unloading forage, where it remained until the 29th of Jan., 1863. The other regiments of the brigade moved towards Falmouth, the 17th, at the time Gen. Burnside attempted to cross the Rappahannock, but the extreme depth of mud compelled him to return, and the brigade returned to their old camp, the 22d, at which time the 2d Regiment joined them. Upon leaving Hagerstown, Gen. A. P. Howe was assigned to the command of this brigade; but Gen. Smith being promoted to a corps-commander, Gen. Howe succeeded him in command of the Division, and the brigade was placed under the immediate command of Col. Whiting, who resigned, Feb. 9th, 1863, and Col. Lewis A. Grant, of the 5th Regiment, succeeded him. The corps was placed under the command of John E. Sedgwick. The brigade remained here through the winter, performing light picket and guard duty, and were drilled as much as was necessary to keep them in good discipline.

All camp equipage, extra clothing, &c., was transported to Alexandria for storage, in April, and the brigade was placed in a good fighting condition.

They left camp, May 1st, and proceeded to the Rappahannock, at Franklin's Crossing, one and one-half miles below Fredericksburg, where they crossed in December previous. The 6th Corps was placed here, with orders to carry the heights back of Fredericksburg, and join the left of Hooker's army, if possible. The larger portion of the army was engaged at Chancellorsville. The night of May 21, the brigade crossed the river, and took a position near Deep Run, the 1st Division on the left, and the 3d Division on the right.

The brigade formed in line of battle, in the A. M. of the 3d, between Deep Run and the City, and charged across a level and open field a distance of a mile, under a heavy artillery fire. The brunt of the battle fell on the 2d Regiment, as it charged up the Heights twenty minutes in advance of any other troops, and drove a rebel brigade back from the crest, and held its position, giving and receiving a murderous fire, until troops came up on the right and left. Thus was St. Marie's Heights captured. The men returned to Deep Run for their knapsacks, then marched through Fredericksburg, along the plank road to join Hooker; but coming in contact with the right of the main rebel army, halted and camped for the night. The 4th, they remained near the road, and were subjected to an artillery fire all day. At 4 P. M., they were furiously attacked by the victorious rebels, (who had defeated Hooker's army,) but although they were repeatedly charged upon by largely superior numbers, they held their ground until night, then withdrew, and recrossed the river at Banks' Ford. They went into camp the 8th, near White Oak Church, and remained until June 5th, at which time they again crossed the river at Franklin's Crossing. This brigade was sent across first, in pontoon boats, before the bridge was constructed. They captured the enemy's works in gallant style, then advanced one-half mile from the river, and held that position until relieved by the 1st and 3d Divisions, when they recrossed the river and remained near it until the 13th, when they started on the march to intercept the rebel army, which was moving north, near the Blue Ridge. The brigade passed through Stafford Court House the 14th, Dumfries the 15th, and arrived at Fairfax Station, the 16th, where they met many old friends, in the 2d Vermont Brigade. They moved to Fairfax Court House, the 18th, and the 20th, through Centreville and Manassas Junction to Bristow Station, where they remained until the 25th, at which time they moved to Centreville, thence to Drainsville, and the 27th, crossed the Potomac at Edwards' Ferry. They passed through Poolesville, Barnesville and Harrisonville, the 28th; the 29th through New Market and Readsville. The 31st, they passed through Julesburg and Westminster, then went into camp near Manchester, and remained there until July 2d, when they proceeded to Gettysburg, thirty-six miles distant, where they arrived at 4, P. M., and were assigned a position on the left, where the hardest fighting had been. This position they held during the engagement, but fortunately for them, the remainder of the fighting was confined to the right and center. The 5th, they started in pursuit of the rebels, and had a slight skirmish with them that night, near Fairfield, thence to Emmetsburg, Catochlin Furnace, Middletown and Frederick Pass, and arrived at Boonesboro the 9th. The 10th, nearly the whole brigade was deployed as skirmishers, and fought the enemy, driving them back to Funkstown; then followed them closely until they crossed the Potomac at Williamsport, the 13th.

The brigade then proceeded to Warrenton, Va., via Boonsboro. Crampton Pass, crossed the Potomac at Berlin, thence through Lovettsville, and near Manassas Gap, arrived near Warrenton the 24th and went into camp, where they remained until Aug. 11th, when the whole brigade was sent to New York City to quell the riots then in progress; they took the cars at Brandy Station and thence by steamship to their destination, where the larger portion of them arrived the 23d. The brigade was stationed in Washington, Union and Madison Squares, the Second regiment was sent to Poughkeepsie, Sept. 5th, and remained until the 13th, then returned to Alexandria via New York City and Philadelphia. The Sixth was sent to Rondout, and the Fourth to Newark N. J., on account of disturbances resulting from the draft then in progress.

The brigade was collected at Alexandria, Sept. 18th, and joined the corps near Culpepper, C. H., the 22d, where they received another installment of recruits, and remained until Oct. 5th, when they, in connection with the corps, were marched to Robertson's Creek, near the Rapidan, as a corps of observation, where they remained until the 10th, when the race between Lee and Meade commenced for the possession of Centreville Heights.

The brigade moved in the night through Culpepper, and the 11th crossed the Rappahannock near the railroad bridge, and recrossed it the 12th, for the purpose of deceiving the rebel generals. The Sixth Corps marched directly towards the rear of the rebel army with as great a display as possible, which had the desired effect of halting the rebel army. As soon as this was accomplished, the corps moved back across the river that night, and the 13th marched rapidly to Bealton Station. The 14th they arrived at Centreville, a few hours ahead of the rebels, who now retreated.

The brigade remained there until the 19th, then advanced south through Gainesville, and to Warrenton the 20th, where they remained until Nov. 7th, when they moved to Rappahannock Station and participated in a slight engagement which resulted in driving the rebels across the river. The 8th, the brigade crossed the river, and followed the rebels to Brandy Station, where they remained until the 26th, when it moved to and across the Rapidan at Jacob's Ford. The 27th the Sixth Corps supported the Third Corps during its engagement with the enemy, for the possession of the Gordonsville Pike. The brigade moved that night at twelve o'clock through a portion of the wilderness. The 28th, it moved across the Gordonsville Pike, and the 2d Regiment was placed on picket. They remained here near Mine Run until the 2d of December; then recrossed the Rapidan at Germania Ford, and returned to their camp at Brandy Station the 3d, having been absent eight days, during which time they were furnished with only five days' rations. They suffered with hunger severely the last three days' especially the last day, in which they marched fifteen miles, with heavy knapsacks, as it was necessary to carry a sufficient amount of clothing to keep from freezing. The quartermasters received rather more than their usual amount of cursing, which they could well afford to do, as they had considerable more than their usual amount of rations to sell.

The brigade remained at Brandy Station all winter. They made but one move, and that in connection with the corps to Madison Court House, Feb. 27th, 1864, to support a cavalry reconnoissance. They returned to camp the 2d of March, and remained until May 4th, when they crossed the Rapidan at Germania Ford, and participated in the battle of the Wilderness May 5th, on which day, in less than two hour's time, the brigade lost 1000 men in killed and wounded, the heaviest loss that it ever sustained at one time. They were also engaged in the battle of the 6th, and moved towards Chancellorsville the 7th, and after a tedious night march, arrived at the latter place the 8th, and moved to the battlefield, near Spottsylvania Court House, that night, and the 9th, erected some slight breastworks. The 2d, 5th, and 6th regiments, in connection with a few others selected from the corps, under command of Col. Upton, made a charge the evening of the 10th, and captured a portion of the rebel works, but not being supported, they were compelled to relinquish them. They participated in the engagement of the 12th where they fought all day, in the rain and mud, over a rebel breastwork, which the enemy stubbornly refused to surrender, until completely exhausted. The 13th, they moved a short distance toward the left, and the 14th, to the left of the army near the Ny river. The 15th, the 11th regiment joined the brigade and its history thereafter is identified with that of the brigade. The 17th, the brigade, in conjunction with the corps, moved to the right and had an engagement, repulsed the enemy and moved back to the left that night, where they remained until the 21st, when they started south and arrived at the North Anna river the 23d, crossed that stream the 24th, and recrossed the 25th, then moved to Hanover Court House, where they arrived the 27th. They moved to the Tolopotomy the 29th, where the 11th regiment had a skirmish. They moved to Cold Harbor, June 1st, charged and drove the enemy, and occupied a position within speaking distance of the enemy, continually under artillery and musketry fire, until the 12th, when they moved across the Chickahominy, thence to Charles City Court House, the 13th, and crossed the James river the 16th. They arrived at Petersburg the 17th, and the 2d and 5th regiments engaged the enemy the 18th and 19th, the 20th, the original members of the 2d regiment who had not reenlisted, started for Vermont, as their term of enlistment had expired. The brigade moved to the left the 20th, and were engaged with the enemy the 21st, also participated in the movement of the 22d, portions of the 4th and 11th regiments were captured the 23d, at the Weldon railroad. The brigade remained at the Williams House until the 29th, when the 6th corps marched to Ream's Station and fought the enemy there. The evening of the 30th, they started back to the Williams House where they arrived the next morning and remained until July 8th, when, in connection with the 6th Corps, they proceeded to City Point, thence by transports to Washington, where they arrived the 10th, and the 11th, participated in the Seventh Street engagement. They left Washington the 13th, and overtook the rebels' rear guard at Poolesville, thence proceeded to Snickers Gap and returned to Washington the 23d. They left there the 26th, for Harper's Ferry, and encamped at Bolivar Heights, returned to Frederick City the 30th, thence on the 5th of August they marched to Harper's Ferry and up the Shenandoah Valley, to Strasburg, where they arrived the 14th and had a slight skirmish. The 16th, they returned to Charlestown and remained until the 21st, when they were attacked by the enemy, and sustained a heavy loss. They moved to Harper's Ferry the 22d, and remained until the 29th, when they moved again to Charlestown, early in September, thence to Clifton Farm, where they remained until the 19th, making a reconnoissance in the meantime to Opequan Creek, where they had a slight skirmish. On the 19th of September the brigade was engaged in the battle of Winchester, each regiment met with severe losses. They were also in the engagement at Fisher's Hill the 21st and 22d, and at Mt. Jackson and New Market the 24th. Oct. 5th, they moved to New Market, on the 6th, to Woodstock, the 7th, to Strasburg, the 10th, to Front Royal; on the 13th, to Milltown, the 14th, to Middletown, and participated in the battle of Cedar Creek the 19th. The 21st, they moved to Strasburg and remained until Nov. 9th, when they moved to Newtown, thence on the 10th to Kearnstown, where they remained until Dec. 9th, when they proceeded to Washington by railroad, thence on the 10th by transports to City Point, and from there by railroad to Meade's Station, then went into winter quarters, in the works previously occupied by the 5th Corps. They remained here performing severe picket and fatigue duty, until March 27th, when they were moved in front of Fort Fisher, and charged the enemy's picket line; they also participated in the engagement of the 29th, and were fiercely engaged in the battle of April 23, resulted in the evacuation of Petersburg and Richmond, and which finally the surrender of the rebel army.

The brigade followed the enemy the 3d, and came up with them the 6th, at Sailor's Creek, and a slight engagement ensued. The 2d Regiment, under command of Col. Tracy, fired the last shot at the enemy from the 6th corps.

The brigade crossed the Appomattox, the 7th, and remained at Farmville until the 9th, thence to Burkesville Junction, where they remained until April 23d, when they proceeded to Danville, Va., and remained until May 18th, when they proceeded to Manchester, Va., thence, the 24th, to Washington, D. C., and went into camp, near Munson's Hill, Va., and remained until June 28th, 1865, when the Vermont Brigade, as an organization, ceased to exist, and the various regiments comprising it were mustered out as follows:

All recruits, whose term of service was to expire previous to

Oct. 1st, 1865, were mustered out June 19th, near Ball's Cross Roads, excepting those of the 11th. And the entire residue of the regiments were mustered out as follows:

|--------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| The 2d Reg't, July 15th, 1865. | The 5th, Reg't, June 29th, 1865. |
| “ 3d “ “ 11th, “ | “ 6th, “ “ 29th, “ |
| “ 4th, “ “ 13th, “ | “ 11th, “ Aug. 25th, “ |

The recruits of the 11th Regiment, whose term of service would expire previous to Oct. 1st, were mustered out, June 24th. The remaining members were consolidated into four companies, and stationed as follows:

Co. B, at Fort Foote; Co.'s A, C, D, at Fort Slocum. Subsequently the latter companies were transferred to Fort Foote, and mustered out Aug. 25th.

The 11th Regiment was mustered into the United States service, at Brattleboro, Sept. 1st, 1862, with the following officers: Col. James M. Warner, Lieut. Col. Reuben C. Benton, Maj. George E. Chamberlain. It left the State, Sept. 7th, and proceeded to Washington, where it was stationed in Forts Lincoln, Slocum, and Stevens. By special order of the War Department, it was changed to Heavy Artillery, December 10th, 1862. It remained in the fortifications around Washington, drilling as Infantry and Heavy Artillery, doing picket and camp guard duty, also working on the fortifications, until May, 1864, when it was ordered to the front, and joined the Vermont Brigade.

The first Cavalry Regiment, (which had no soldiers from Greensboro in its ranks, until the fall of 1864,) was mustered into the United States service at Burlington, Nov. 19th, 1861, with the following officers: Col. Lemuel B. Platt, Lieut. Col. George B. Kellogg, Majors William D. Collins and John D. Bartlett. It left the State, Dec. 14th, and proceeded to Washington, and was stationed at Drainsville and vicinity, performing picket duty. It participated in the campaign, in the summer of 1863, in Maryland and Pennsylvania. It entered the Shenandoah Valley through Manassas Gap, in the fall of 1864, and moved to New Market, thence to Timberville. It left the latter place, Oct. 7th, and proceeded with Sheridan, in his retrograde movement. It was selected for rear guard, and had a slight skirmish with the enemy, also participated in the engagement at Tom's Brook, Oct. 9th, and at Cedar Creek, the 19th, where it captured 161 prisoners, 167 horses and mules, 23 pieces of artillery, battle-flags, wagons, &c. It also participated in the skirmishes of the 27th and 29th of Sept. at Waynesboro, and Oct. 13th, at Cedar Creek, Oct. 22d, the officers and men whose term of service had expired, left the regiment to return to the State.

The regiment remained on the old battle-field, at Cedar Creek, until Nov. 10th, at which time it moved with the army to Kearnsstown, and participated in a running fight with Rosser's rebel cavalry, the 11th and 12th, with slight loss. It moved again with the corps the 19th, to Mt. Jackson, and returned to camp the 23d, where it remained until Dec. 7th, when it moved to Moorfield, and returned to camp the 11th. It moved up the Valley the 18th, and camped the second night at Lacy's Springs. It had a skirmish the 20th, and returned to camp the 22d, where it remained all winter near Winchester. The regiment left Camp Russell, Feb. 7th, 1865; and formed part of Sheridan's command that moved up the Valley. They met the enemy at Waynesboro, and after a sharp skirmish, drove them from the field, moving on through Charlottesville. The regiment reached White House Landing, March 18th, and remained until the 24th, thence proceeded towards Dinwiddie Court House, and was employed the 31st, corduroying roads. They moved to the front, April 1st, and had an engagement at Five Forks, also a skirmish the 2d, and an engagement the 3d. They crossed the James River at Deep Creek the 4th, and proceeded to Jeter's Station, on the Richmond and Danville Railroad, where it arrived the morning of the 5th. They moved through Amelia Court House, the 5th, and Prince Edwards Court House, the 7th. They reached Appomattox

Station, the evening of the 8th, and participated in the engagement of April 8th, which proved to be the last of the war, for them. After moving around from one position to another, they arrived at Washington, the 16th, and at Burlington, Vt., June 13th. A portion of the command was mustered out, June 21st, and the remainder consolidated and mustered out, Aug. 9th.

The 15th Regiment (which had twenty-two citizens of Greensboro in its ranks) was mustered into the United States service, at Brattleboro, Oct. 22d, 1862, to serve nine months. The officers of the regiment were as follows: Col. Redfield Proctor, Lieut. Col. William W. Grout, Maj. Charles F. Spaulding. It left the State Oct. 23d, and proceeded to Washington, where, in connection with the 12th, 13th, 14th and 16th Regiments, which formed the 2d Vermont Brigade, it remained a short time. The brigade was stationed near Fairfax during the winter, and the 15th Regiment was quartered near Unionville a short time. The duty was not very severe, but quite a number died of disease. Part of the regiment was at Bealton Station June 1st, and left there the 15th, about which time the brigade was collected together and ordered to join the 1st Army Corps, then on its march toward Gettysburg. After a tedious march of seven days, Gen. Stannard, at the head of his brigade, reported to Gen. Reynolds, (the commander of the 1st Corps,) at Gettysburg, the evening of July 1st. The 15th Regiment was not allowed to participate in the battle, but was sent back to Westminster, Md., as a train guard. It returned to the brigade the morning of the 2d, but was sent back at noon to Westminster, where it remained until after the battle, and continued on train guard until the army arrived at Boonesboro, when it was returned to the brigade, and remained with it during the movement on Lee's front at Hagerstown, thence to Williamsport, at the time of Lee's escape into Virginia. The regiment then proceeded to Berlin via Boonesboro and Crampton Pass. They remained at Berlin a short time, when they returned to the State, and were mustered out at Brattleboro, Aug. 5th, 1863. A large number of them were furloughed home for a few days, and furnished with return tickets, before their final muster out.

The 2d Vermont brigade was engaged in only one battle, and that at Gettysburg. But in this they exhibited the true spirit of the Green Mountain Boys, and performed deeds of valor that would have merited the highest praise, even if performed by veterans. They proved to the people at home, that they did not go there to shirk their duty.

There were but few of the citizens of Greensboro in the following organizations, but it is thought fit to give a brief account of their operations.

The 7th Regiment was mustered into the United States service at Rutland, Feb. 12th, 1862, under command of Col. George T. Roberts, and left the State March 10th, and proceeded to Ship Island, Gulf of Mexico. They subsequently went to Vicksburg, and were in the battle of Baton Rouge, and soon after proceeded to Pensacola, Fla., thence to Barrancas, in the west Florida Department, where they remained until August 10th, when they started for Vermont, and the original members who had not reenlisted were mustered out the 26th of Aug 1864. Those who did reenlist returned to New Orleans. They were at Mobile Point, Alabama. Feb. 18th, 1865; March 31st, before Spanish Fort, Alabama; April 17th, near Whistler, Alabama; May 31st, Mobile, Alabama, June 30th, Clarksville, Texas; Aug. 15th, Brownsville Texas. The recruits whose term of service was to expire before Oct. 1st, were mustered out Dec. 1st, 1865.

The 8th Regiment was mustered into the United States service, at Brattleboro, Feb. 18th, 1862, and left the State, March, 6th, under the following officers: Col. Stephen Thomas, Lieut. Col. Edward M. Brown, Maj. Chas. Dillingham. The regiment was sent to Ship Island, Gulf of Mexico, and was stationed during the summer, at Algiers, opposite New Orleans, detachments, which were occasionally sent out and suffered considerably, especially at Bayou des Allemands. The regiment formed a part of Gen. Banks' besieging force, at Port Hudson; and was engaged in the assaults of May 27th and June 14th.

The regiment was subsequently stationed as follows:— July 31st and Aug. 31st. 1863, at Thibaudaux, La. Oct. 15th, 1863, Carrion Crow Bayou, La. Nov. 15th, 1863, Vermillionville, La. Dec. 15th, 1863, New Iberia, La. Jan. 15th, 1864, Franklin, La. March 15th and April 15th, Algiers, La. May 15th, Thibaudaux, La. June 15th, Morganzia, La. July 31st, near Frederick, Md. Aug 31st, near Charlestown. Va.

The regiment participated in the engagement at Opequan Creek Sept. 19th, also at Fisher's Hill the 21st and 22d of September, and was subsequently stationed at Harrisonburg, Va. It moved from there Oct. 6th, and was in the engagement at Cedar Creek, Oct. 19th; thence proceeded to Summit Point, Va., where it remained during the winter, performing heavy guard and picket duty on the line of railroad from Charlestown to Winchester. April 4th, 1865, the regiment, with other troops belonging to Hancock's Corps, moved up the Shenandoah Valley to Newtown, but returned to Summit Point about April 11th. On the 21st of April, the regiment proceeded to Washington, D. C., by railroad, and encamped near Fort Stevens, where they remained until the 1st of June, when orders were received for Dwight's Division, to which the regiment was attached, to proceed to Savannah, Ga. After they had embarked for that purpose, the order, so far as the 8th Regiment was concerned, was countermanded by application of the Governor.

The recruits whose term of service would expire previous to Oct. 1st, 1865, were mustered out June 21st, 1865, and the entire residue June 28th, 1865.

The 9th regiment was mustered into the United States service at Brattleboro, July 9th, 1862, and left the State July 15th, under the following officers: Col. George J. Stannard, Lieut. Col. Dudley K. Andross, Maj. Edwin S. Stowell. The regiment was stationed during the last of July and first of August at Winchester, Va. They were captured at Harper's Ferry Sept. 15th, 1862, but were immediately paroled and sent to Chicago. They were exchanged Jan. 10th, 1863, but remained there guarding rebel prisoners until April 1st, when they were sent to Fortress Monroe, thence to Suffolk, Va., thence to West Point, Va., thence to Yorktown. Col. George J. Stannard was promoted to Brigadier General of Volunteers, April 8th, 1863. The regiment was stationed at Yorktown Sept. 15th; and from Oct. 31st, 1863, until June 30th, 1864, at Newport, N. C. Sept. 1st, at Newbern N. C. They arrived at Bermuda Hundred, Sept. 15th, and left their camp at Point of Rocks, the 29th; crossed the James river and participated in the engagement at Chapin's Farm.

The regiment was attached to the First Brigade, 2d Division, 18th Corps, and remained near Chapin's Farm until the evacuation of Richmond, with the exception of being sent to New York, to assist in preserving the peace at the Presidential election in November. They also performed an honorable part in the affair of the Williamsburg Road, Oct. 27th.

The regiment was one of the first to enter Richmond, after its evacuation, and remained there until June 13th, 1865; when the original members and recruits whose term of service would expire previous to Oct. 1st, were mustered out. The remainder was consolidated and stationed at Portsmouth, Va., until mustered out, Dec. 1st, 1865.

The 10th Regiment was mustered into the United States service at Brattleboro, Sept. 1st, 1862, and left the State, Sept. 6th, under the following officers:— Col. Albert B. Jewett, Lieut. Col. John H. Edson, Maj. Wm. W. Henry. The regiment proceeded to Washington, and was subsequently stationed above that city near the Potomac, at the following places:— Nov. 1st, 1862, Seneca Locks, Md. Dec. 1st, 1862, Offut's Cross Roads, Md. Jan. 1st, 1863, White's Ford, Md. May 31st, Poolesville, Md. On the invasion of Maryland, it was attached to the 3d Corps, and was at Warrenton, Va., July 31st, and Sept. 15th at White Sulphur Springs, Va. The regiment participated in the engagement at Orange Grove, Nov. 27th, 1863, and remained near Culpepper during the winter. It was attached, on the reorganization of the army, to the 3d Division of the 6th Corps, and met with a slight loss at the Wilderness, May 5th, 1864. It was actively engaged at Cold Harbor the 1st and 3d of June. About July 5th, it was sent to Baltimore with the 3d Division, and was engaged the 9th at Monocacy Junction, also at Winchester Sept. 19th, and was reported at Mt. Crawford, Va., Sept. 30th. The regiment left Strasburg Oct. 10th, and proceeded to Front Royal, thence on the 13th to Millwood, the 14th to Middletown, and was engaged the 19th at Cedar Creek, where it remained until Nov. 9th, when it moved to Camp Russell, near Kearnsstown. The 10th, a portion of the regiment was engaged in a skirmish.

On the 3d of December the regiment proceeded to City Point via Washington, D. C., and camped at Warren Station Dec. 25th, where it remained until March 30th, 1865, and charged the rebel works the morning of April 2d. The works were successfully carried. It also participated in the engagement of April 6th, at Sailor's Creek, and then marched to Appomattox Court House, where the rebel army surrendered April 9th, 1865. Subsequently the regiment moved to Burkesville Station, Danville, Richmond, thence to Washington, D. C.

The original members and recruits whose term of service would expire previous to Oct. 1st, were mustered out at Ball's Cross Roads, Va., June 22d, 1865. The remaining members were transferred to the 5th Regiment, and mustered out of the service with that regiment, without being assigned to companies, June 29th, 1865.

The 17th regiment was mustered into the United States service by companies, and ultimately under the following officers: Col. Francis V. Randall, Lieut. Col. Charles Cummings, Maj. Wm. B. Reynolds; companies, A, B, C, D, E, F and G, left the State April 18th, 1864, under command of Lieut. Col. Charles Cummings, and formed a part of the 9th Corps, with which it was engaged at the Wilderness May 6th, Spottsylvania May 12th, Cold Harbor June 3d, thence proceeded to Petersburg and continued in the advanced works near there, suffering loss nearly every day until Sept. 15th. The regiment was stationed at Fort Davis from November 13th until February 11th, and participated in the engagements of April 1st and 2d, also were actively engaged until the evacuation of Richmond.

The recruits whose term of service would expire previous to Oct. 1st, were mustered out June 22d, 1865, and the remainder of the regiment July 14th.
